17-26th May 2018: 4x4 Adventure in support of military veterans suffering from PTSD

WHAT IS IT?

Driven to Extremes is a charitable organisation which supports military veterans suffering from PTSD by taking them on challenging vehicle adventures.

Saxa Vord 2018 is a fund-raising 4x4 Rally to the most extreme northerly point of the UK. This 10 day driving adventure through the Scottish Highlands, North Coast 500, Orkney and Shetland Isles will be a mixture of stunning landscapes, incredible roads, military history, ancient archaeology and warm hospitality as you make your way ever further north.

Driving remote tracks on Shetland, you'll join a rare group of adventure motorists who have driven the restricted military road to the very top of the UK. From there, no landmass stands between you and the North Pole!

WHO DO YOU HELP?

The Rally will be led and supported by military veterans recovering from PTSD as they guide you through what is now officially the most beautiful country in the world.

Where as some activities such as Polar trekking or Atlantic rowing can allow too much thinking time, vehicle expeditions can cross continents in a matter of days. The relentless pace ensures that veterans are overwhelmed with new and rapidly changing experiences.

Operating in remote and challenging environments, having to work as a close-knit team and the support within, military banter, opportunities for leadership and the constant laughs along the way, helps push horrific memories to the back of their minds.

HOW DO I JOIN?

If you own a 4x4, get a team together and join us on this 'extreme' adventure. The cost is £895.00* per vehicle with 2 drivers, which includes all return ferry costs from mainland Scotland to the island of Unst, Shetland, branded clothing and vehicle graphics. Additional team members cost £295.00* per person.

Discounted accommodation has been negotiated, allowing participants the choice of camping, hostels or hotels. We ask that each team raises a minimum of £1,000 for Driven to Extremes in support of veterans.
